URIs in HTTP can be represented in absolute form or relative to some known base URI [11], depending upon the context of their use. The two forms are differentiated by the fact that absolute URIs always begin with a scheme name followed by a colon. For definitive information on URL syntax and semantics, see "Uniform Resource Identifiers (URI): Generic Syntax and Semantics," RFC 2396 [42] (which replaces RFCs 1738 [4] and RFC 1808 [11]). This specification adopts the definitions of "URI-reference", "absoluteURI", "relativeURI", "port", "host", "abs_path", "rel_path", and "authority" from that specification.

At this point, I just want you to be able to not worry and I think I'll just borrow a quote from Andrew Carnegie here ... He's one of my heroes

"No man will make a great leader who wants to do it all himself or get all the credit for doing it."

so i decided to negotiate with the bank of england to see if i can make an account with them and do business through them because frankly i already had "technical issues" with western union (which i didn't have until this point) so it seems like a bad idea to wire transfer the entire fund all at once just to move it from one bank to another, and my account in the US is only insured by FDIC up to like $750,000, and i presume you used the bank of england and i have no steady fund of my own with my bank in the US, so it seems more fitting i think for me to see if i can work with them and spread the money to several investments to minimize risk from any one investment since i'm still pretty young and have time to increase my wealth to an extent, so that I will have more money to work with to help those in need once i'm done planning.

Besides, it will take me at least 10 to 20 years to develop my knowledge and skills and abilities and plans to the point of being able to have plans that operate at a continental scale. Anyway, i emailed them right before i typed this to you, so i'm awaiting a response and ill let you know, but I do believe this is the best way to move forward given the circumstances and the fact that I would go absolutely bankrupt if i did the transfer right now and I trust that the money is mine and i don't need all of it on my person this instant, so i'd rather see if there are any other options besides wire transfer, which has more inherent security risks, and the risks seem to increase as the size of the transfer does.

Basically, I'm using my intuition and my best judgement on this and i feel that it was to the point where being forthright and honest about naturally, it is best to keep secret whenever it is "to the point [...] forthright [...] honest [...]" is not the same as what is "[...] to the point, [...] forthright, [...] and honest" depending on the interpretation of and, though to force an interpretation of and... that is quite the interpretation of and, though enforce upon interpretation [...].

[[[a principal utility of the passage of time]]]
[whatever i want]

...[...] is little understood as is
